CATTLE

WICHITA, May 28. This was another dull day in the cattle alleys. The receipts were larger than for the past few days, but the quality was no better, and buyers and sellers could not agree on prices. Some went out in first hands, and others were held over. There is no change in the general market. Green, grassy stuff is lower than last week in sympathy with other markets. If there was any choice butcher stuff brought here would sell at high figures, for there is a strong demand for it; but it must be good. Poor, green stuff is hard to dis-

REPRESUNTATIVE SALES. The following are the reprint at the yards today:

The hog supply was very liberal for Thursday and larger than was expected. The quality was much better than the average of late, and the packers got good droves of fair hogs. The local packer demand was the principal factor in the activity of the market. The market opened strong, and grew stronger as the day advanced. Traders generally quoted the market strong to 5c higher in the afternoon. Tops brought $4.42%; the top hogs today were better than yesterday. brought $4.25@4.40. The demand for pigs was very light and they were 10@15c lower in sympathy with eastern markets. market closed active and steady at the high point of the day.

Quicker Than Lightning.

"Quicker than lightning" is a phrase collequially used to express the maximum of rapidity. But, according to a contemporary, electricity itself is outstripped by that old fashioned machine, the human body, by which it appears power can, so to speak, be generated in the brain, trans mitted through the nerves and developed in the muscles in an infinitesimal fraction of a second. It is stated that a planist, in playing a presto of Mendelssohn, played 5,595 notes in four minutes and three seconds. The striking of each of these, it has been estimated, involved two movements of the finger, and possibly more. Again, two voluntary movements per second. Again, the place, the force, the time, and the duration of each of these movements was controlled. All these motor reactions were conditioned upon a knowledge of the position of each finger of each hand before it was moved while moving it, as well as of the auditory effects to force and pitch, all of which involves at least equally sensory transmissions. If we add to this the work of the memory in placing the notes in their proper position, as well as the fact that the performer at the same time participates in the emotions the selec-tion describes, and feels the strength and weakness of the performance, we arrive at a truly bewildering network of impulses, capable of doing many things at once.

An Ancient Race. Of the builders of aucient mounds and other remarkable earthworks found in this country we have no real knowledge, but popular belief and scientific theory Mike attribute these works to a race pre the American Indian. Even the Indians themselves appeared to regard them as the work of some very ancient people. The relics of carved stone, elegantly formed pottery and bronze, silver and copper or-naments found in explored mounds indicate a skill and degree of civilization not found among the Indians by the first white settlers of the country. The Inter-Ocean quotes a writer on this subject to the effect builders "indicate that the ancient popula tion was numerous and widely spread, as shown from the number and magnitude of their works, and the extensive range of their occurrence; that it was essentially bomogeneous in customs, habits, religion and government, as appears from the great uniformity which the works display, not only in respect to position and form, but in all minor particulars; and that the features common to all the remains identify them as appertaining to a single grand sys-tem, owing its origin to a family of men moving in the same general direction, act-ing under common impulses and influenced by similar causes." Archæologists find in the mounds evidence of a very different state of society from that among the In Architects and Superintendents. Office in Fech- dians. The Indians were a nomadic race, subsisting by hunting; the mound builders were apparently an agricultural people. Many of the mounds seem to have been erected as military works; these would only have been needed by an agricultural Alcohol and Tobacco.

Oliver Wendell Holmes remarks in one of his books: alcoholic stimulants-in fact, I hardly meddle with them at all, except a glass or thing, and I come tonight to correct a two of champagne occasionally. I find wrong impression which you have been untable that by far the best borne of all drinks containing alcohol. I think, as one grows

I cannot grudge an old man his pipe, but I think tobacco often does a good deal of harm to the health-to the eyes especially, to the nervous system generally, producing headache, palpitation and trembling. I myself gave it up many years ago. cally speaking. I think self narcotization and self alcoholization are rather ignoble substitutes for undisturbed self conscious ness and unfettered self control.

In the proceedings of the Royal Geograph cal society for January, 1891, it is estimated "The coolest man I ever saw," said the that the population of the world in 1890 onductor as the car rolled northward, was 1,487,600,000, representing an average of 31 to the square mile, and an increase of 8 per cent. during the decade. Of the continents Asia has the largest population crease, 6 per cent. Australasia has the smallest population, 4,739,000, and the "Finally I shook him and told him to smallest average per square mile, 1.4, but wake up. > The Growth of a Great City. One of the most singular facts about the growth of London is its regularity. It has seen stated that it may be roughly taken that every month about a thousand houses are added to London. In August of last year 765,577 houses had to be supplied by the water companies with water, in September that number had increased to 708,797. In August of 1889 754,464 houses had to be supplied, or 11,113 below the number in the same month of 1800. In September, 1900, the companies had to supply 10,976 houses more than in September of 1839. This extension is not confined to any one portion of the capital, but a preference is still being shown for the north and northwest suburbs.

I have lately had occasion to notice dresses ordered for empresses and grand duchesses, but they pale before the morning gowns provided by a conturier a la mode for Ferdinand, prince of Bulgaria. He had a passion for attiring himself in silken sumptuosities. One of the gowns was in electric blue, lined with the softest surah over eiderdown, and affecting somewhat the form of a princess robe, with embroideries of a passementeric in which steel and lightning blue beads were mixed. The
